Presidential guards were in full swing last night, the Palace gates leading to the Don China Room (Mendocino bridge) were closed, and the Arroyo, who in the past often spent her weekends at work, kept her schedule this weekend as usual.

A day after incoming Presidential Chief of Staff Michael Defensor warned that Malacanan would fight "fire with fire" if rebel officers used violence in their bid to ouster the Arroyo, the Palace appeared to downplay the threat of any serious attempt against the presidency.

Growing party lines, however, criticized Malacanan for warning that there would be bloodshed if military rebels moved against the Arroyo.

"The statement was recorded," Sen. Manny Roxas said.

"The use of force by a state presupposes that there is a moral basis to resort to such violence. Malacanan must exercise extreme caution so it does not become the use of such force. With mounting public support, it may find itself in a situation it may be unable to control, which in turn may result in its collapse," Roxas said.

He said Defensor's statement "takes the stakes in the current political crisis."

Administration Sen. Ralph Recto said incendiary statements could only worsen the situation.

"Fighting fire with fire will only burn the house down," Recto said. "This reminder also goes to those who plan to bring this government down violently. Our constitutional politics need not be violent."

He added, "Any disturbance in the political front will set us back for years. Let us not shoot ourselves in the foot again."

Morales is coming off a back-to-back performance in a loss to Zolter Robinson in September at Staples Center, but the 20-year-old needs a solid performance.

Pacquiao won his last fight—a sixth knockout victory over Mexican Hector Montenegro last September—but lost the previous bout to Morales last March in Las Vegas.

When they square off for the second time tonight (about 9 a.m. Sunday in Manila) at Thomas & Mack Center, their respective futures, as well as a lot of tero, who was knocked out by Pacquiao three years ago.

Another loss for Morales could signal the end to what has been a decade career with world titles in three weight classes. Pacquiao cannot afford consecutive losses to Morales if he expects to remain among boxing's elite.

"I don't care if it's by decision or by knockout, I need to win," said Pacquiao, who is in his 10th fight for the Philippine President Gloria Arroyo will broadcast the fight to live on television.

"I have trained hard," said Pacquiao, 27, of General Santos City. "Book of us, we train hard. But I have to get average and even my name become 1 in 10."

CRACKS ARE SHOWING in the top echelons of the Armed Forces, whose leadership has repeatedly sworn loyalty to President Macapagal-Arroyo despite the "Hello Garo" election fraud scandal.

AFP leaders pointed out that over the past week, two ranking military officials made it possible for junior officers detained for the Ombudsman's inquiry of July 27, 2005, to make known through the media their sentiments via a via the Arroyo administration.

Last Thursday, Philippine Air Force chief Lt. Gen. Jose Reyes permitted 12 rebel AFP officers to speak with the incoming in their detention quarters at Villamor Air Base. Two days earlier, Brig. Gen. Marito Quevedo, head of the Intelligence Service of the AFP, did not stop Harry L. Antonio Yllanes, a leader of the indigenous Magdalo group, from giving interviews after a hearing at the Makati Regional Trial Court. (Stories on Page A7.)

Triller's call for a "change" in the status quo provoked the outrage of last Magdalo officers from an Army division center in Fort Bonifacio last Sunday.

Brig. Gen. Ruben Salazar was promptly ordered as camp commander and reported that the "Magdalo" were added by fellow officers in exception.

According to the AFP leaders, the explicit and implicit promises given to the rebel officers showed that senior officials were now sympathetic to their cause due to their complaints of "unprofessional" appointments.

The growing rifts in the perceived political accommodations have reached a point where, a senior officer said, they would not support any move to oust the President but would do nothing to stop it.

Coming home after being away for 14 years, I see all around a lot of changes—for the better, I am afraid, not for the worse, as many friends and relatives say.

Certain things remain as they were, including the miseries of a people weary of what they see around them.

Comelec looking for new voting machines

By Jovana Aring

UNBLED BY A BOTTLED MILK, press room containing machine died and screaming calls for its top officials to resign, the Commission on Elections (Comelec) is now casting its eye on a new electronic voting system.

Comelec Chair Benjamin Abalos Jr. said Friday he would put his Indian counterpart for tips on how to build the appropriate electronic voting technology and install it in time for the congressional and local elections next year.

Abalos will play host to S. B. Tendre, the Chief Election Commissioner of India on Jan. 23. Agnes from conferring with Comelec officials. Trade will meet with local lawmakers next year.

Tendre will be accompanied

ABALOS

By joining others, Sapelli Aganwal, director of the Secretariat of the Election Commission of India, who will demonstrate the use of the same electronic voting machines used with great success in the recent Indian elections, Abalos said.

"Much has been said about the successful conduct of electronic voting in India," Abalos said. "We are looking forward to seeing first-hand how the Indian system operates."

Abalos said Filipino election officials will "compare notes" with the Indian visitors and see if India's electronic voting system could be adopted by the Comelec.

"There is much to be gained from the sharing of knowledge in this way, and this will be very valuable input into our plans to modernize the elections scheduled for May 2007," Abalos said.

He said computerization improved the credibility and efficiency of the election process in India, which has more than 674 million voters.

Abalos earlier called on Congress to make up its mind

The country's election modernization program launched in 2004 after the Supreme Court, citing glaring irregularities, nullified the P1.3-billion deal entered into by the Comelec for the purchase of vote-counting machines.

The court also struck down the Comelec's program for transmitting election results electronically.

The nullified deal and allegations that a Comelec consultant had rigged the 2004 polls in favor of President Manuel Arroyo had resulted in calls for the resignation and prosecution of Abalos and other top election officials.

Opposition wants snap polls, not coup

By Herman Borja-Lalor

A FORMER MANICURE YET today denied the United Opposition (UO) was connected in any way to alleged snap coup plots against the Arroyo administration.

Speaking at a weekly breakfast break in Quezon City, President Arroyo said he and former senator G. R. Roxas and House Speaker Arroyo met with opposition leader Ed. de Villamor recently and they agreed that the best way out of the country's political crisis was to hold snap elections, not a bloody coup.

Arroyo promised assistance to administration officials facing the opposition, particularly politicians associated with former President Joseph Estrada, to help them get a snap in the wake of the escape of last justice secretary officer involved in the 2001 Ombudsman meeting.

The opposition was being "unwisely used to improve" by administration officials in their efforts to force snap elections, Arroyo said.

"It is safe to say that the great majority of us are all of the members of the opposition forces are for snap elections," he added.

Sen. Roxas and Arroyo met with de Villamor last week. Villamor is currently for president.

Roxas, who had led snap attempts against President Arroyo, was himself linked to the 2004 election and receiving those who supported with the intention to get up.

WASHINGTON—WHITE HOUSE OFFICIALS LISTENING to Osama bin Laden's latest tape heard a weakened man on the run, but other US officials and analysts heard a dangerous leader rallying his troops, mocking the United States and possibly setting up another attack.

Economic costs of the Iraq war

THE COST OF THE IRAQ WAR TO THE UNITED STATES IS FAR BIGGER THAN THE $200 billion that Larry Lindsey, President George W. Bush's economic adviser, estimated as the US was preparing to go to war three years ago.

Three Deputy Defense Secretary David Wolfowitz claimed that Lindsey's figure was a gross overstatement and that Iraq could "readily finance its own reconstruction."

Like the Bush administration's inexperience on Saddam Hussein's "response of mass destruction," an estimate of the cost of the war was off the mark.

Joseph English of the University of Colorado and Linda Bilmes of the Harvard University place the total cost of the war in America at more than a trillion dollars.

The total cost of the Iraq war rises to a staggering $1.8 trillion when the direct expenditures and the macroeconomic costs, including the increased price of oil, are considered according to English and Bilmes.

Like the US and other countries, the Philippines is paying for the costs of the Iraq war through high oil prices. English and Bilmes estimate that $5 to $10 of the price of a barrel of crude is due to the Iraq war.

Their estimate of the total cost of the war does not include all costs borne by other countries, including Iraq, and costs associated with increased inflation, reduced investment, and lower incomes of America's trading partners to name a few.

Mo' Manny,

By Gil C. Calacangan Jr.

THERE IS THE nation of Philippine media and corporate giants that have paid top money to ride on the highly anticipated battle between Filipino boxing sensation Manny Pacquiao and Mexican Edw. Morales to boost their stock on the local market but also among rich Filipino banking overlords.

Like Mike Tyson in his prime, the Filipino knockout puncher is an undisputed favorite of Filipino boxing fans and has a long record of victories against world champions.

Coming in on the Filipino boxing scene for the first time is the Filipino boxing giant, owned by William T. Wong, ABS-CBN Broad-

But, even as the fight is being promoted by the Philippine Airlines, the fight is being promoted by the Philippine Airlines, the fight is being promoted by the Philippine Airlines.

By selling from P100 million to P100 million, the fight is being promoted by the Philippine Airlines, the fight is being promoted by the Philippine Airlines, the fight is being promoted by the Philippine Airlines.

ABS-CBN's offer of a black card deal because it would not only allow more Filipinos to watch it, it would also allow them to see it on the leading sports entertainment network in the country.

What does Pacman do with his money?

By Kevin Trinidad

AS 100-100-1000 PACQUIAO will have been fighting for the country, his people, his club, his President and, of course, his family and his bank.

In his work must be the quick weight to follow by the time, considering he has pocketed a total of $2 million for his successful career with the Philippine Airlines.

Based on my analysis, the Philippine Airlines, which is the country's largest, is the most successful sports network.

In the last year, the Philippine Airlines has been the most successful sports network in the country.

Manny Pacquiao bought a Honda Civic. This is a model year for about $11,000 (over P1 million).

OFW modeling tilt in Hong Kong

THE PROSPERITY MODELING competition of OFW in Hong Kong attracts prominent catwalkers and society among Filipinos working abroad.

BE hawit models Jean Marie, Cynthia A. Torres, Charley Roque, Virginia Garcia Balboa, Ruth Hernandez, Linda Talarico, Jane Rosales, Brenda Balboa and Cheryl Saldivar will stride down the runway and compete for the 12th Missy Top Model 2006 on Jan. 24 at Ocean Garden, Central Hong Kong.

The show is produced by the United Productions under Bertha Gohing, with Anthony Irembe directing. The Filipino OFW population in HK is about 300,000.

Student Filipiniana gown and cocktail dresses will be provided by Filipino fashion designers Eddie Sadrilles, who will also give the award to one of the board of jurors.
